

COURSE SYLLABUS

Expository Preaching

Course Lecturer: Haddon W. Robinson, PhD

Harold John Ockenga Distinguished Professor of Preaching and Former President at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary

Course Description

Preaching is the primary way God has appointed for the teaching of the truths of His Word. Preaching done well honors God, expounds the Bible, and equips its hearers for spiritual growth and fruitful ministry. But those who preach must make a study of the art. Dr. Haddon Robinson, professor for this course, taught preaching skills for more than five decades and in this course he offers tried and proven methods that have trained many who are either preparing for or are active in various areas of ministry. By focusing on the world of the Bible, the mindset of the expositor, and the development of teachable ideas, Robinson leads the student to the preparation and presentation of effective sermons.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of the course, the student should be able to do the following:

- Understand the basic elements in sermon construction and what they should accomplish—introduction, central idea (based on an exegetical idea), transitions, illustrations, development of the sermon, and conclusion.
- Build a bridge between the ancient world of the Bible and the contemporary world of today's audience.
- Define and practice expository preaching.
- Apply three developmental questions to the study of a text of Scripture.
- Discover the main idea in any given passage of Scripture.
- Develop sermons around main ideas of Bible passages.
- Define both exegetical idea and homiletical idea, understanding the difference.
- Understand and apply good communication models.
- Explain the difference between inductive and deductive sermons.
- Generate an effective sermon outline.
- Write and deliver an expository sermon.
