

COURSE SYLLABUS

Biblical Geography Basics

Course Lecturer: John A. Beck, PhD

Course Description

Although the Bible is not a geography book, it is a book filled with geography—geography that shaped the way the writers of the Bible thought and communicated. Therefore, to the degree that we miss or misunderstand the geography in our Bibles, we may miss or misunderstand a part of what the Lord wants to share with us. This course, led by Jack Beck, is designed to explore the absolutely vital relationship between what the Almighty has to say and the place from which He says it.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of this course, you should be able to . . .

1. Understand that geography is used frequently and widely throughout all portions of the Bible to communicate God's thoughts to us.
2. Know that geography plays a significant role in delivering the message of the Bible, especially God's plan of salvation.
3. Understand the importance of organizing the Bible geographically to see the relationships between portions of the Bible that are linked to one another by location.
4. Understand the basic geographical features of the Fertile Crescent and the Promised Land and their impact on travel, water acquisition, weather, and culture.
5. Understand how the geography of the Promised Land influenced the biblical writers' lives, language, and cultural context.

Course Lecturer

John A. Beck, PhD

Education:

- Trinity International University, PhD

Teaching Career:

- Permanent adjunct faculty member, Jerusalem University College in Israel where he regularly conducts field study courses which link geography and Bible communication
- Teacher of courses in Hebrew and Old Testament at various colleges and universities for more than 20 years

Course Methods

The lecture content for each lesson is provided in three easy-to-use formats: video, audio, and PDF text. Students can choose the medium (or combination of media) that most closely aligns with their individual learning styles.